

SERUNKA

A Colombian Myth

Narrated and Illustrated by Ethel Bustamante

Serunka was a man not well put together.

One day the townspeople asked him, would you like to be the father of the world?

And Serunka said yes!

They started to dress him in pure gold. They even put on him a gold hat and bag.

When they were done dressing him, they blew him high into the sky.

When he arrived to the sky, it was the end of darkness. Serunka became the sun.
